Artist comments:

My imagination of art concerns the expression of inner feelings towards the human, nature as well as the environment. I love to explore what is going on around me, from fine detail such as human's shadows and their complex interactions to the nature's colour at different season in the vast space. For several years, I have manipulated with traces of lines and colour which break in to flat areas of muted tone of restrained colours on the canvas. I do not intend to produce an " illustration " of things and places. I do, however, mean to exhibit a kind of correspondence between my inner feeling and the outside world around me. Previously, I might have defined my painting "abstract", now I have found things are abstract in themselves.

As an up-and-coming contemporary artist in Thailand, Lukkana's works are well received by many collectors over the world. Her works are exceptional in such a way that people tend to understand her inspirations not through first sight, but inner feelings which built up over time. Her works can be found in many prestigious projects, such as the Ardmore Park in Singapore and the St. Regis Residences in San Francisco.
